

Oswaldo Garcia

Oswaldo (Oz) Garcia is the senior executive account manager (SEAM) for the National Security Agency (NSA), Government Communications Systems (GCS). In this capacity he reports to the vice president of Strategic Management and Business Development.

Prior to being named to his current position, Mr. Garcia was a program director at BAE Systems, responsible for business growth in the NSA market. Prior to joining BAE Systems, he served as the deputy chief of the Plans, Programs and Execution office (LR) for the NSA's Installations and Logistics organization, where he oversaw the Extended Enterprise Mission Alignment facilities build-out program. In his 16-year career at the NSA, Mr. Garcia held leadership positions in several organizations, including the Associate Directorate for Security and Counterintelligence, the Signals Intelligence Directorate, and the Directorate of Acquisition. With his core expertise in major program development and management, he successfully delivered programs ranging from $1 million to more than $1 billion. He recently retired from the Air Force Reserve, where he served as a major military construction program manager on the HQ Air Force staff.

Mr. Garcia holds a B.S. in mechanical engineering technology from Northern Arizona University and an M.B.A. from the University of Wyoming. He is also a graduate of the Air Force Squadron Officer School and the NSA Senior Leadership Development Program.

He is a member of the Armed Forces Communications Electronics Association and a life member of the Reserve Officer's Association.

Harris is an international communications and information technology company serving government and commercial markets in more than 150 countries. Harris is dedicated to developing best-in-class assured communications[®] products, systems, and services.